

I'm a big Mark Millar fan and who wouldn't be after reading the likes of Marvel Knights Spider-Man, Civil War, Old Man Logan and The Ultimates? While I was initially disappointed to hear that he'd be focusing on his creator owned "Millarworld" projects from now on, he's not disappointed his fans with titles such as Nemesis and Superior. Now, all of the following adaptations of his work have either been rumored or confirmed to be heading to the big screen in the next few years, but which are you most looking forward to seeing? With A-List talent already attached to some of them (Matthew Vaughn looks likely to helm Superior or The Secret Service, while Tony Scott has been attached to Nemesis) it's thanks to the Scottish creator that we'll be seeing more than just Marvel and DC characters in cinemas over the next few years.
