

Between the less than impressive critical and financial reaction to Green Lantern last year and Christopher Nolan bringing his Batman trilogy to an end a couple of months ago, the only superhero currently confirmed to be heading to the big screen is Superman in next June's Man of Steel. There has been a lot of talk about a Justice League movie being released in 2015, but "talk" is all it is right now. However, Green Arrow will be getting his own series this Fall and the CW are also said to be hard at work on exploring Wonder Woman's early years in Amazon. So, with DC Entertainment seemingly intent on keeping their huge stable of iconic superheroes on television, the question now is who else you would like to see joining Ollie and Diana. Below are some of the most iconic heroes and teams most likely to get a series, but

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=67110>