

2012 has been quite a year for comic book movie lovers. We may have kicked things off with the disappointing Ghost Rider: Spirit of Vengeance, but we were then blown away by Joss Whedon's incredible finale to Marvel's "Phase One" plans with The Avengers. This summer also saw Spider-Man's return to the big screen in the reboot, The Amazing Spider-Man, and while "The Untold Story" seemingly ended up on the cutting room floor, it impressed most fans. To top it off, we had Christopher Nolan's latest Batman film as he broke the threequel curse and delivered a stunning conclusion to his trilogy in the form of The Dark Knight Rises. There have been other "heroes" on the big screen this year (John Carter, Katniss Everdeen, Abraham Lincoln) and there are few more to come (Aaron Cross, Judge Dredd, Bilbo Baggins) but these are mainstream superheroes, so the question now is which
