

If there's one thing that moviegoers seem to be sick of, it's 3D. The higher ticket prices are a pain, but the ever increasing amount of poor quality post-converted movies is an even bigger problem. Since the release of the record breaking Avatar in 2009, studios have taken every opportunity they can to make even more money by offering up their releases in the format and Marvel Studios are unfortunately no different. Both THOR and Captain America were released in 3D and neither wowed audiences despite a handful of scenes which benefited. Next year, it's the turn of Marvel's The Avengers 3D (as it's now officially called), but will you see it in 2D or 3D? Here's your chance to decide. So, are you willing to give Joss Whedon a chance? Are you so sick of 3D that you wouldn't consider seeing the movie in anything other than
