

Matthew Vaughn's X-Men: First Class sequel shares its name with the same beloved comic book arc that featured the X-Men of the present day failing to prevent the Brotherhood from assassinating Senator Robert Kelly. As you more than likely know, these events led to an alternate future timeline where Sentinels rule the United States and mutants live in internment camps. It's fair to assume that the X-Men: Days of Future Past will borrow elements from this storyline, but would you actually like to see the film take place in two timelines? (possibly bringing back the cast of the previous X-Men trilogy) It's hard to imagine that working too well, especially as it would be such a shame for the focus to be taken off James McAvoy's 'Charles Xavier' and Michael Fassbender's 'Magneto'. Also, do we REALLY want to revisit the past X-Men films after the state that Brett Ratner's The Last
