

Rogue One: A Star Wars Story shows no signs of slowing down, having taken in approximately $19.9 million internationally, and $18.1M in the US on Wednesday. By the time today's numbers are tallied, the Star Wars prequel is expected to have reached about $653.8M globally, which puts it on track to hitting that $700 million milestone by Friday or Saturday. Fans are clearly flocking to the movie in theaters, but what about the highly anticipated home release? Well, according to the guys over at TheForce.net, there are pre-order listings online for Rogue One on DVD and Blu-ray which show an April 28 release date. This is subject to change of course, but considering The Force Awakens hit shelves on April 5, it probably won't be too far off the mark. #RogueOne on track to break $400M dom SAT on #NewYearsEve & pass Cap3 to be #2 dom hit of 2016. $440M thru MON, shd pass Dory by JAN8. — Gitesh Pandya (@GiteshPandya) December 29,
