

Variety reveals that newcomer Letitia Wright has joined the cast of Black Panther. She joins a cast made up of names like Chadwick Boseman, Michael B. Jordan, Forest Whitaker, Lupita Nyong'o, and Danai Gurira, but who exactly will she be playing? Well, the trade says, "Wright will play the mystery role of Serita, who's part of the Wakanda community." Before you go checking on Google, there's no sign of a character from the comic books with that name, so could she be playing someone else? It's certainly possible, and it's worth noting that Wright bears quite a resemblance to the younger sister of T'Challa, Shuri. As you'll likely already know, she inherited the Black Panther mantle for a time. The actress has appeared in British TV shows like Doctor Who and Chasing Shadows, but Steven Spielberg's Ready Player One looks set to be her breakout role. Wright was actually chosen from dozens of other actresses, so she's clearly talented. Black Panther is being directed by

Read more: https://www.comicbookmovie.com/black_panther/ready-player-ones-letitia-wright-lands-mysterious-role-in-marvels-a146187