

Speaking to The Jonathan Ross Show, Helen Mirren confirms that she'll return for the sequel to last year's hit action/comedy film RED, based on the DC comic of the same name. She says that filming begins next year, despite not having a director yet (the first film's director, Robert Schwentke, is busy filming R.I.P.D. right now, and may be still busy with the project by the time RED 2 begins production). On Mirren's part, the actress appeared on The Jonathan Ross Show last night and expressed her commitment to the role, saying: We're doing Red 2 next year. This new film will have an entirely original storyline, drawn up by Jon and Erich Hoeber, who adapted Warren Ellis and Cully Hamner's comic for the first picture. I expect they'll have had some kind of conversation with Ellis, at least at the spitballing stage, though how involved he'd actually want to be is another

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/BatFreak/news/?a=47027&t=IREDi Sequel To Begin Filming Next Year Says Helen Mirren