

It seems those still a bit sore about Bryan Singer's treatment of Superman aren't so annoyed that they're unwilling to give him another shot at the Mutants, as the favorite to take over from Matthew Vaughn on the X-Men: First Class sequel is also the favorite - by a large majority - in our poll. Singer came first with a whopping 1,005 Votes (43.10%). Fans must have been very impressed with how J.J. Abrams handled the melding of new and old Star Trek universes as he came in second with 354 Votes (15.18%), and just beating Duncan Jones with 163 Votes (6.99%) was Looper director Rian Johnson. Brett Ratner got 88 Votes, I'm assuming as some sort of sick Halloween prank..

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/rorschachsranst/news/?a=69369>