

Many thanks to Amazing Comics for the video. This year at the International Comic Book Festival of Angoulême, a pavilion chiefly dedicated to Manga, Marvel was also represented in this space through an exposition entitled “Avengers” which was dedicated to Ryan Meinerding, an american concept artist (‘Iron Man’, ‘Thor’, ‘Captain America’, ‘Avengers’). An assistant to Ryan explained “Each work is the result of around 2 to 3 days of work, but their main feature is that the artist painted all of them directly in Photoshop. The fact that they are printed on canvases gives them a physical dimension and makes them real paintings. All of the prints are unique and will be for sale during their exhibit at the Galerie Arludik in Paris, which begins on March 15, 2012. Ryan Meinerding will be in attendance for the opening! The works will be on sale for between 700 to 3,000 euros.” Exhibit from
