

Rian Johnson's Looper proved to be a hit with fans and critics alike when it was released last week, and the writer and director is now offering a very unique incentive to get you back in the theatre this weekend. He's recorded a Director's Commentary which you can download and take to the theatre with you to listen to over the course of the film via his official Tumblr page. Below is a statement from the director and instructions on how to download it. Will you guys be giving this a try? Sound off with your thoughts in the usual place! I recorded a commentary track to be downloaded, put on an ipod and listened to in the theater as you're watching Looper. This is an odd thing I tried with Bloom, and have gotten a few requests for it again, so here it is. It is totally different from

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=68250>