

Speaking with The Playlist while promoting Safe House, frequent CBM actor Ryan Reynolds talks about his next venture in the genre, R.I.P.D. - based on the Dark Horse graphic novel of the same name. Reynolds says that he 'would like' the film to have a sequel, even saying that (plot-wise) it's set up for such a sequel if the first film's successful... "I'm hoping to be able to work with all those people again," Reynolds said. "It could be a franchise. It certainly is set up, plot-wise, for a sequel. But nobody's signed on for that just yet. We would like it to be [a film series.]" Below is some plot info surrounding the graphic novel/film... The Dark Horse comic R.I.P.D. is adapted by Universal Pictures with this fantasy crime film focusing on a newly deceased cop (Ryan Reynolds) who's drafted into a squad of zombie cops that battle the supernatural. Red's Robert Schwentke

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/BatFreak/news/?a=53754&t=RIPD_Set_Up_For_Potential_Sequel_Says_Ryan_Reynolds