

With Marvel & Joss Whedon's highly-anticipated film The Avengers in the square of filming, becoming more of an actuality, it's no surprise the actor whose reprising his praised 'Iron Man' role, Robert Downey Jr. seems more confident in how the film will turn out. And revealing so in a recent brief interview, tipped from our great ally RIMBreaks, check out what he had to say. Is there any way the movie can meet fanboys' expectations? Yes, I wouldn't have said that a month ago, but it's actually going to be pretty good. It's really tough to imagine all those superheroes actually making sense together but Joss Whedon, our director, is an incredibly surprising individual with what he's been able to think out. Robert, will you reprise the Iron Man role one more time after that? "Well, one for sure: 'Iron Man 3,'. And then we'll renegotiate ... again." Marvel's The Avengers picks up when an unexpected
