

The red carpet premiere for Marvel and Joe Johnston's praised-Captain America: The First Avenger film was held in Los Angeles today. And while the ensemble cast evidently made an appearance, other actors from Marvel's Cinematic Universe came down to support the film, including Thor's Chris Hemsworth & Jaimie Alexander, and notably Iron Man actor Robert Downey Jr. When asked if he was aware of Sunday's leaked trailer, Downey answered, "Yes, I did. I'm happy it leaked and I'm happy it was taken down." The 'Iron Man' actor then went on to say, "I said this at comic-con last year - that it was an incredibly ambitious idea, and the fact that we're getting close to having completed realizing it, I have some pride about that." When asked about his 'Captain America' co-star, Chris Evans, Downey proclaimed, "Hes really sharp, hes really fun and hes created I think just the right tone for Steve
