

In a recent interview with Entertainment Weekly, Kirkman discussed the upcoming project stating that the comic, which will be release its first issue on February 8, is “going to be very grounded in the real world,” he continues, “no zombies, no space aliens, no superheroes. It’s just going to be real human characters doing somewhat horrible things to each other.” The story will follow a professional thief by the name of Conrad Paulson, Kirkman goes on to explain a little about the character, “He is one of the greatest thieves who’s ever lived, but he’s gotten to a point in his life where he realizes that he’s chosen his professional life over his family life and greatly regrets that. He’s got an adult son who is kind of following in his footsteps but doing a horrible job, and he has an estranged wife that he is still very much in love with.
