

TV Guide has gotten a scoop from Robert Kirkman on the second season of AMC's series The Walking Dead. Kirkman reveals that Andrea, played by Laurie Holden, will have a stronger presence in the second season by taking her pain and turning it motivation to become one of the protectors of the group such as she did in the comics. Said Kirkman: "Andrea very much wanted to die in the CDC, so we're going to be dealing with that. She'll be learning some guns, and she might not quite get to a certain level, but we are definitely going to be going down that road." The Walking Dead will resume later this year.
