

With a previously reported rumor about Jon Bernthal being cast in Frank Darabont's new show for TNT, L.A. Noir, people began to speculate if Shane would soon meet the same fate as he did in the comics. Adding to the speculation was a rumor that one of the cast was upset with Darabont's departure and asked to be released. Robert Kirkman addressed these rumors while talking to The Hollywood Reporter and stated that even if Bernthal was involved, that did not necessarily mean Shane had to die: Last year Lenny James was on The Walking Dead, Human Target and Hung as well as doing a show in the U.K. for the BBC. It's not unusual these days for people to be on multiple shows at the same time. The way shooting schedules work for cable, it really does open doors for that. The Walking Dead stopped shooting in early November and doesn't
