

One of the most divisive aspects of Rogue One: A Star Wars Story was the resurrection of the legendary Peter Cushing as a CG version of the icy Grand Moff Tarkin from A New Hope. Though the special effects used were clearly top notch, many felt that the uncanny valley was still an issue and it took them out of the movie. SPOILERS: The 5 Biggest Moments From The ROGUE ONE Trailers That Weren't In The Movie In a new interview with IGN, director Gareth Edwards reveals that he was initially apprehensive about bringing the character back, but was convinced that it could be done effectively. He also reveals the identity of the British actor who actually played Tarkin pre-CG makeover. Do you guys think they did a good job with the CG Tarkin, or would you have preferred if the character was only glimpsed briefly looking out the window in that first shot? Rogue One is in theaters now, and you can check out
