

"A Man Without Honor" refers to Jaimie Lannister, who makes a welcome return to our screens this week. But as usual it's a theme that runs through a few other strands of the episode. Once again shouts of "Theon you little shit" will be heard the world over, as The Stark's former ward continues down the path of ultimate bastard. After discovering Bran and co have fled Winterfell, Greyjoy and his men hunt them down. The final shot of the episode sees the charred remains of two young boys hoisted up for all to see. Was it Bran and Rickon? Maester Luan certainly believes so. At Harrenhall we are treated to another conversation between Tywin Lannister and Arya. It's now very clear that Tywin has grown fond of his cup bearer, and despite toying with the idea of killing him when his back is turned, Arya has come to respect him
