

Well, that's that for season 2 unfortunately, but did HBO's fantasy drama series ever go out on a high note. Nothing could match the overall spectacle of last week's episode, but "Valar Morghulis" did a great job in balancing the many different story arcs while finishing up the current chapters and leaving us VERY hungry for more. In Kings Landing Lord Tywin takes full credit for saving the city, while poor Tyrion receives no thanks - save from Varys - and is stripped of his rank as Hand Of The King. The unfortunate Lannister also has the burden of some nasty facial scars after the battle, but at least Shae decides to stand by her half-man. At court, Joffrey decides to discard Sansa and pledge himself to the recently widowed Margery Tyrell, which the young Stark girl couldn't be happier about - until Littlefinger reminds her that just because the psychopathic

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/rorschachsrrants/news/?a=60965>