

IGN caught up with actress Rose Byrne and asked her thought about a possible X-Men: First Class sequel. Byrne said that that she has signed on for three films and that a sequel depended on how well the first film did. She also went on to say that she loved working on the movie and that she is very proud of the film. Said Byrne: "Yeah, we all had to sign on for three, I believe. Well, I did anyway. But as of right now I have no idea if they're planning on doing another one. But that was the idea depending on how it all went, I suppose. We'll see though. I loved working on it and loved working with the cast. I loved Matthew Vaughn. I also loved the style. The era and the fashion. And it was kind of kitsch-y and funny. It was a really fun and sophisticated superhero

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JakeLester/news/?a=43184&t=Rose_Byrne_Talks_iX-Men_First_Classi_Sequel