

Any CBMer worth their salt knows that Armie Hammer came very close to donning the cape and cowl in Warner Bros.' ill fated Justice League movie that never saw the light of day. The actor has expressed his disappointment in a number of interviews, explaining that they were only days from shooting when the roof caved in on the project. Well, he might just get another go at it. According to Moviehole's sources, WB have put Hammer at the "top of their list" to take over the role from Christian Bale in their planned Justice League movie.. "Hearing, from a very good source, today that Hammer, who is now a hot commodity after such flicks as "The Social Network" and "Mirror Mirror", not to mention his upcoming lead role in "The Lone Ranger", is "back on WB's radar" for the part of Batman. Not for a solo flick, but for the ensemble

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/rorschachsrrants/news/?a=68393>