

After the tweets, he received many questions and responded to most. He also went one step further and joined prometheus-movie.com after they contacted him about the trailer. On that site he submitted even more details about trailer that provides plenty of new information. Check out his tweets and his submission to prometheus-movie.com below. Christopher Duvall's Twitter Account - @Tofur "Had to join to to comment on this. I am the Chris that saw the trailer. I run a theatre in the Denver area and my theatre has Nielson kiosks in the lobby for surveys of upcoming titles. They told me that they had few different trailer for various movies, but when they said PROMETHEUS, I said I must see the trailer. It was nearly 2 minutes long and looked fairly polished and complete. It was using a temp track for music and the trailer was VERY similar to the original teaser for
