With English actor Henry Cavill set to don the "S" on his chest in Zack Snyder's Superman reboot, casting for supporting roles are well underway. While much isn't known about the "modern" reboot, essentially the roles to be cast, Clark Kent's main squeeze Lois Lane is almost guaranteed to appear. Though several actresses has either expressed interest in playing Lane, or have been rumored to have read for the role, today's latest rumor via Gregory Little, a Branding Consultant and Creative director who specializes in social media, has Twilight's Kristen Stewart in the mix. As of now, take it with a grain of salt. And Zack Snyder is set to direct Superman into theaters Mid-December next year, reportedly commencing production in August. What do you think?
