

Always take all rumors with a grain of salt, but thinkmcflythink.com is reporting that Zack Snyder will be borrowing from J.J. Abrams 2002 Superman script, Flyby, by having Superman/Kal-El sent to Earth to fulfill a prophecy. The following information is from thinkmcflythink.com

Rumblings we hear is another vital Flyby component is being used; the revelation Supes/Clark/Kal is a lost Kryptonian prince prophesied to save the world. Is it as radical as the big stink being made about changes to Spider-Man's origins in The Amazing Spider-Man as leaked by Badass Digest? It's out there, and lazy, let's be honest throwing in the tired "Chosen One" or "Destiny" cliché. But considering how far Flyby originally deviated, it was the least egregious material Abrams cooked up (God forbid they used Supes dying and visiting his father in Kryptonian Heaven!) Some of you might instantly cry "Bullshit!" with claims of "Christopher Nolan would never let that happen!" Well

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/nailbiter111/news/?a=59886>