

Take this rumor with a grain of salt for now, but the reader ChicagoBat, from the site Batman-News.com had the pleasure to get a tour on the new Batcave that will be used on The Dark Knight Rises, which is currently housed at Sony Studios. It looks like it will be a little bit similar to the one from Batman Begins, but with some changes. Here's what he says about the visiting: Visiting L.A. and had a friend working at Sony Studios show me the Batcave set. It's half finished, and pretty much looks like the same set we saw in "Batman Begins". They're still completing the quarry walls but the wooden manor foundations were all there in the corner. They may add more set dressing with equipment and such but don't expect a radical redesign as most fanboys are expecting. Funny thing was I asked the construction guys if they were using
