

We all know that Christopher Nolan is a genius, but did we know he was also a fortune teller? Well Rush Limbaugh seems to think so. Even though The Dark Knight Rises has been in development for several years Rush has dreamt up a scenario in which Nolan chose Bane to be the main villain as an attack upon GOP presidential hopeful Mitt Romney. So forget all that nonsense about Nolan wanting a villain that could be a physical challenge to Batman like he says over and over again. The theory goes, Mitt Romney's old employer Bain Capital shares a similar name to Bane. So that means when American voters hears Obama's campaign mention Bain during the race voters will associate Mitt Romney with an evil villain. "Do you think it is accidental that the name of the really vicious firebreathing, four-eyed whatever-it-is villain in this movie is named Bane?" "So this

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/nailbiter111/news/?a=64040>