

Get More: Movie Trailers, Movies Blog "I think it's very wise advice: never congratulate yourself too much, and never berate yourself too much. This is very sage advice," the actor told MTV News in a recent interview. "I look at moviemaking more as the experience than the outcome, which is by and large a pretty healthy way to look at it." As we all know, the outcome for Green Lantern was not good. Torn apart by critics and rejected by moviegoers, the movie failed to live up to expectations, something Reynolds is aware that he can't let get to him. "If you're invested in the outcome of every single movie, you're bound to have moments where you aren't going to be as happy. I've had movies that were very successful that I wasn't happy with." "I have no idea," he said when talk turned to the chances of him once again playing Hal Jordan

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=53908&t=Ryan_Reynolds_Looks_Back_On_GREEN_LANTERN_Still_No_Idea_About_Sequel