

Actor Samuel Jackson joins the cast of Spike Lee's remake of Chan-wook Park's ultimate revenge film, Oldboy. The LA Times has learned that Jackson will be playing a small but pivotal role in the film. Jackson has come on board for a small but critical part in the new film, according to a person close to the production who was not authorized to talk about it publicly. The actor will play the man who is being tortured by the hero (Brolin) in a key revenge scene. Fans of the original will remember the scene as perhaps the most visceral and disturbing of the film. Protagonist Dae-su Oh exacts vengeance on a man who once guarded him by extracting his teeth one-by-one with the claw end of a hammer. They go on to say that in Spike Lee's version the torture scene will not include the removal of teeth, but don't worry Jackson's
