

Last night at Warner Bros' Comic-Con presentation, stars Martin Freeman, Ian McKellan, Richard Armitage, Andy Serkis, surprise guest Elijah Wood and director Peter Jackson attended the panel to screen new footage from The Hobbit: An Unexpected Journey and The Hobbit: There and Back Again. This time, the footage was screened in 24fps and not in 48fps, which was controversial with fans who saw footage in that format at Cinema-Con. Thanks to Entertainment Weekly, we have a full description of the four scenes shown to Hall H attendees. Check it out down below. Scene 1: Gandalf and the 13 dwarves, led by Thorin Oakenshield (Richard Armitage), debate whether Bilbo should be allowed to join their quest to reclaim their treasure from Smaug, since it's not clear if he is clever and sneaky enough to help them break into his secret lair. Eventually, Gandalf stands firm, and Bilbo reads over the "standard"

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/NerdyGeek/news/?a=63882>