

The new series will focus on Ryu and Ken as youngsters honing their skills. The show will be produced by Jacqueline Quella and comes from the mind of Joey Ansah, creator of the successful fan film, Street Fighter: Legacy, which you can see below.. Here is the press release in full, followed by the SDCC announcement video.. Capcom USA, Inc. and Assassin's Fist Limited have signed an agreement to produce a live-action series based on Capcom®'s successful 'Street Fighter®' game franchise. To be called 'Street Fighter: Assassin's Fist', this thrilling, multi layered series will take the audience back to the formative years of the iconic characters, Ryu and Ken, as they live a traditional warrior's life in secluded Japan. The boys are, unknowingly, the last practitioners of the ancient fighting style known as 'Ansatsuken' (Assassin's Fist). The series follows them as they learn about the mysterious past of their Master, Gouken, and the tragic
