

It was a wild day! Today's Hall H panels were something to be remembered. The first panel was concerning Quentin Tarantino's Django Unchained. The director arrived with various cast members such as Jamie Foxx, Christoph Waltz, Walton Goggins, Kerry Washington, and Nash Bridges himself, Don Johnson. During the panel, Tarantino in a very entertaining, and self-glorifying mood touched on a lot of aspects such as what the essence of the film would be, and how he prepared his actors to engage, and immerse themselves into the roles. It was very enjoyable seeing great performers reflecting on working with the director, and to top it off a decent amount of footage was shown. A sizzle reel as Tarantino called it. A scheduled "Trailer Park" sadly was cancelled in last minute, but what followed was the first step to blowing things out of proportion. The Warner Bros/Legendary Pictures had begun, and immediately, the main
