

Well, it was an absolute pleasure taking part in this year's Comic-Con in San Diego. Yesterday I reflected on the Pacific Rim, Man Of Steel, and Django Unchained panels. However, as you guys probably noticed that wasn't everything that was presented in the "magical" Hall H last Saturday. Everything felt a bit surreal, mainly because so many great things happened...one after another. Warners Bros. ended their panel with Peter Jackson's The Hobbit. Trust me this was the one panel where you could literally feel the ground shaking. I initially thought everybody was more excited about the Superman, and Marvel panel. I was naive to think that. The Hobbit panel was a lot of fun, I'm not such a huge fan of middle earth, but I got excited because of the atmosphere that Hall H embodied. I do have to say they pull out the big guns at Comic-Con. Peter Jackson had arrived with some

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/CoastToCoastStation/news/?a=63940>