

At this point, we really have no idea whether any sort of time travel will be featured in X-Men: Days of Future Past, but the title has certainly led many fans to conclude that we'll see SOMETHING similar to the classic tale it may or may not be named after. This has of course resulted in the actors who played the mutants in Bryan Singer and Brett Ratner's trilogy to be quizzed about the chances of returning in the highly anticipated sequel. Patrick Stewart has strongly hinted that he will be back as 'Professor X', and Famke Janssen has also revealed that she would open to coming back as 'Jean Grey'. So, how about Shawn Ashmore's 'Iceman'? Well, he hasn't been asked, but again, would be more than willing... "Yeah, I mean, I honestly no idea - that's an honest answer. I would love to play Bobby Drake again. It's a character

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=68709>