

"Yes, well, the studio's faith is very strong," Levy revealed in a recent interview with The Playlist. "Even 'Night at the Museum' didn't test like this. People were cheering in a movie theater. The last time I remember that happening was in 'Rocky III' with Clubber Lang or even against Drago in 'Rocky IV.' So we got that kind of visceral reaction from audiences and the studio not only took the bullish move of developing a sequel and asking me to sign on but then also didn't deny it when it leaked in the press. That was a show of confidence that hopefully we will reward." The director went on to confirm that all of the main cast members have signed on to reprise their roles in future installments. (not a huge surprise these days, although perhaps a little unusual for a movie such as this one) "I will produce and direct

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/joshw24/news/?a=47088&t=Shawn Levy Confirms That He'll Direct iReal Steel 2; Hugh Jackman Also Expected To Return