

A fourth trailer for The Amazing Spider-Man was classified earlier this month alongside a teaser for Skyfall (both of which will presumably be attached to Men in Black 3). Following the premiere of the four minute sneak peek during America's Got Talent on Monday, a SIX minute sneak peek has now been classified by Alberta Film Ratings. Whether this is something completely new, a combination of the sneak peek we've already seen and the new trailer or just a mistake is completely unknown at this point. It's worth noting that this isn't a website which is known for posting unreliable information. However, unless we get some sort of official confirmation, fans might have to wait until the release of Men in Black 3 to discover whether or not Sony Pictures really are planning on unveiling yet another sneak peek. What do you guys make of this? Sound off with your thoughts

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=59873>