

The UK's Anorak has posted a story about a local boatman that helped the filming of the finale for Skyfall by West Scotland village of Crinan near Christmas time. Now if you remember from past reports this location was mentioned before because this is also home to Duntrune Castle, the oldest inhabited castle in all of Scotland. The owner of the castle leaked that the big finale would be filmed there, but producers changed their mind about using the actual castle itself and could reconstruct the guts of it in a hangar if they like. So, this boatman informed Anorak that there will be boat chases and explosions. And his job during the shoot was navigate the boat that Daniel Craig was in, without being seen. Instructed to go like hell and stay hidden from the cameras but, for 'God's sake' above all else, keep the highly paid, allegedly macho and/or beautiful, people starring
