

Logan premiered earlier today at the Berlin International Film Festival, and the first wave of reviews have been overwhelmingly positive. Hugh Jackman has maintained that this movie will mark his final appearance as Wolverine, of course, and as a result, we've all been wondering if this might be the release which finally sees him don the classic yellow and blue (or brown) suit. After all, James Mangold teased it in The Wolverine, while the final Logan trailer featured a comic book with that in it. Well, it appears as if we can forget seeing it in a flashback or the present day as We Got This Covered reports that the yellow suit does not make a physical appearance. The only time it shows up is in that comic book, and the mutant quickly tells the young X-23 that the team never donned colourful spandex costumes like those featured there. Man, this franchise sure does love shing on our dreams, right? Despite that, Logan

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/x-men/logan/spoilers-does-hugh-jackman-final-y-don-the-classic-yellow-costume-in-a149044>