

TV Line's Michael Ausiello has taken to his regular "Ask Ausiello" feature to drop some spoilerific details about upcoming episodes of The Walking Dead and Arrow. He kicked things off with something which should make fans of Robert Kirkman and Charlie Adlard's ongoing comic book series VERY happy. Sunday's episode of the AMC adaptation will reportedly see the recreation of what he describes as one of the "most iconic images ever". This week's Woodbury-set hour features one of the show's most iconic images ever — and one fans of the comics will surely recognize. My guess? Well, judging from a scene in the trailer and a promotional poster which sees 'The Governor' sitting in a chair and staring blankly ahead, I'm thinking it will be a little something like the panel below. Thoughts? Meanwhile, over in Arrow, it sounds as if Oliver Queen's greatest secret is about to be revealed! Despite going to,

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=69156>