

In last night's episode of The Flash, Savitar revealed that one of the Fastest Man Alive's allies will betray him, another will fall, and a third will suffer a fate worse than death. I guess it's Iris West who fits into that second category, because after an accidental trip to the future - I guess Barry has had enough of fing up the past - we got to see that the Speed God ends up murdering Barry's future wife. Common sense says that The Flash won't kill Iris off, so it's a little hard to get fully behind this big reveal. However, seeing how Barry goes about stopping this from happening should be pretty interesting. So too will learning the fates of Team Flash after Savitar's deadly warning, while the mystery of what future Barry did to earn his wrath also promises to be one of the show's most intriguing parts from here. The concept of time travelling into the future should
