

The good folks over at Ain't It Cool News, were some of the select few people invited to tour the set of Captain America: The First Avenger, while the movie was still filming. During his time on set, Quint was able to unearth a massive load of new information concerning the plot and even discovered a small tidbit concerning the inevitable sequel. Here's what was learned. [Again, this contains massive spoilers] On whether finding Cap on ice is the beginning or end of the movie: The movie begins in present day as an excavation uncovers something in the ice. The art pieces [production art] I saw included a wide shot of the excavation site which looked a little THING-ish, digging equipment in a small camp illuminated by bright lights, and a great shot of a familiar round object, obscured by thick ice, colored red, white and blue with a big, white

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=40970&t=font\_colorredSPOILERSfont\_More\_From\_The\_Captain\_AmericaTFA\_Set\_Visit