

Despite Saban's Power Rangers reboot being due for release in just over three months, fans have only had a brief teaser trailer and a few promotional pictures to tide them over. Now, thanks to a new report from The Wrap, we've been given a little more insight into how the film's plot will play out. The report reveals that the film's main villain, Rita Repulsa (Elizabeth Banks) is a 65 million-year-old former Green Ranger gone rogue, confirming fan theories in relation to the character possessing a green Power Coin. Of course, it wouldn't be a Power Rangers film without a giant adversary threatening to destroy the world, and that monster will be Goldar, who was a warrior of Rita's in the original series. Goldar's molecular essence is scattered around the globe after he was vaporized into a cloud of microscopic gold particles in the opening action sequence on Ancient Earth. Rita Repulsa collects gold to resurrect Goldar... and the Rangers have just 71 hours to

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/action/spoilery-power-rangers-plot-and-character-details-revealed-in-new-report-a147464>