

"Oh I'd be happy if they add the Black Panther and maybe Dr. Strange," revealed Stan Lee in a recent interview with I Am Rogue when he was asked which of his many creations he'd like to see join Earth's Mightiest Heroes in the inevitable sequel to Marvel's The Avengers. "Those two and probably Ant-Man, which I think they are working on. Maybe I'll play a little role in that." As for how he feels about seeing the characters assemble on the big screen, Stan added: "I never imagined I'd see any of my characters become movies. But this was a logical thing to do. It was smart. I'm amazed that DC didn't beat us to it with the Justice League. But you've got to hand it to Marvel." Of course, Marvel Studios aren't the only ones who are working on bringing his creations to cinemas over the next few years. 20th

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=58580>