

Many thanks to Los Angeles Times: Hero Complex: "Did I do it well? Did I look like a truck driver? Because I'm a method actor. I bought myself a truck and I rehearsed!" They just tell me what to do. I never have anything to say about it. When I show up, I never know what I'm gonna do." "I think young kids have always loved fairy tales — stories of monsters and giants and witches. But as you get older, you can't read fairy tales anymore. But then along come superhero stories and they fill the same gap. They're like fairy tales but they're for older people in the real world, and I think everybody loves things that are bigger than life, you know? And certainly superhero movies are." "I wonder why DC Comics doesn't have me do a cameo in Batman? Just think how people would come to see that. They wouldn't
