

To mark the 10 year anniversary of September 11th, 2001, nearly 100 Sunday comic strips came out in full force to pay their own unique tributes to the tragic and heartbreaking events of that day. Cartoonists Remember have a full gallery of the strips which you can view by clicking on the link below. For now, I thought it would be most fitting to share this one with you by Stan Lee, featuring Spider-Man passing Ground Zero and realizing just how little his problems matter compared to what happened on this day a decade ago. Our thoughts and prayers go out to the victims and their families on this day. Please feel free to pay your respects and share your thoughts below.
