

While at the Cowboys and Aliens premiere at SDCC'11, Star Trek sequel co-writer/producers Roberto Orci and Alex Kurtzman spoke about their ideas and progress on the sequel to 2009's Star Trek and when they plan to shoot it: Orci: We had ideas when we did the first [Star Trek] movie – we always think it is bad luck to think of the sequel – but we had some ideas for the sequel way back then and actually we are doing some of those ideas now and pitching and pitching them to the studio and JJ [Abrams] has been developing them with us. The idea's that we had have stuck so we feel pretty strongly that we have an amazing story and we are going to be shooting very soon. Q: How soon? Orci: Hopefully... Kurtzman: ...Early next year. Orci: I think probably in January, but every time we say "we will be shooting
