

Producer Bryan Fuller (Pushing Daisies) has revealed in Entertainment Weekly that he's very keen to bring Star Trek back to television screens and that he's discussed the possibility with director/producers Bryan Singer (X-Men) and J.J. Abrams (Star Trek-film). Said Fuller--- "Bryan and I are big fans of Trek and have discussed a take on what we would do, and we would love to do it," he admitted. "And I'm sure it would be wisely under JJ Abrams's purview of what happens. He's the guardian of Trek right now." Prior to producing Pushing Daisies, Fuller wrote scripts for Star Trek: Deep Space Nine and Star Trek: Voyager. Nothing will likely happen till after Star Trek 2 is released but the track record of those involved leads me to believe that this is a real possibility. The sequel to J.J. Abrams Star Trek reboot will hit theaters May 17, 2013. Star Trek

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=58286>