

According to Variety, Star Wars: The Complete Saga has sold more than one million copies across the world since it was first released, breaking records for the high-definition Blu-Ray format. Making $84 million from worldwide sales, and $38 million from the US alone, it's been a huge success for Lucasfilm and Twentieth Century Fox Home Entertainment. Seems like those changes made by George Lucas didn't bother that many fans after all! "Once again our fan's enthusiasm to celebrate 'Star Wars' continues to amaze us," Kayleen Walters, senior director, marketing at Lucasfilm told the site. "Our goal was to deliver a premium product that they could enjoy with their family and friends and we are thrilled that they are enjoying it as much as we hoped they would." "Star Wars is a franchise with universal stories that resonates as much today as it did 30 years ago," added Mary Daily, executive VP of marketing

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/joshw24/news/?a=46898&t=iStar Wars The Complete Sagai Sales Pass One Million Makes 84 Million Worldwide