

The folks from I Am Rogue recently caught up with actor Stellan Skarsgard, whose reprising his 'Erik Selvig' role from THOR, in next summer's The Avengers. Discussing the size of the role, who majority of his scenes are with, THOR's post-credits scene, and filming progress among other things, read on below. On THOR's post-credits scene... "It was shot by Joss about half a year or more after we finished shooting Thor. So that was the first time I had worked with Joss and I think the forth time that I worked with Sam (Jackson)." On whether that was his first time on The Avengers set... "Yes. When we shot the tag from Thor to Avengers, we shot it with a 3D camera that was a horrible contraption with two cameras and the mirror and stuff. It was extremely clumsy. I was considering not wanting to do the film if we were going to shoot it

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=45579&t=Stellan_Skarsgard_On_Erik_Selvig_Role_In_iThe_Avengersi_Lokis_Mind_Control_More