

Yesterday, it was revealed that Paramount Pictures was planning on re-releasing Raiders Of The Lost Ark in IMAX theaters for one week, starting September 7th (ahead of the Indiana Jones: The Complete Adventures Blu-Ray release on September 18th). Now, in an interview with New York Times, legendary director Steven Spielberg discusses the re-release of the film which spawned one of the greatest action/adventure trilogies (if not the greatest) of all time. "For me, it's always been the bigger the screen, the better," Spielberg said. "It's the only marked contrast we have to the generations that are seeing our movies on phones and hand-held platforms. It's a complete relief to be able to see a film that many people have just experienced on a palm-sized platform technology, suddenly hurled at that them on an Imax-sized screen." Spielberg worked with sound designer Ben Burtt on supervising the IMAX conversion of Raiders Of The Lost

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/BatFreak/news/?a=65763>